

HUSBAND LOSES BRIDE, 16, ON MOTHER'S COMPLAINT

Chauffeur Bridegroom Now in Jail and his Wife Is in Girl's Home.

Maria Durawitz, sixteen, a needle-worker who had learned to be an American, lived with her mother, Pauline Durawitz, at No. 106 Christy Street, in a three-room flat in which eight persons, including two men boarders, slept every night. Maria had been keeping company with Angelo Sparro, twenty-two, chauffeur, of No. 66 Bayard Street, Maria's mother objected.

Maria talked it over with Angelo and Oct. 29 they got a marriage license and next day were married. They went to live at Angelo's home. The mother had a police alarm sent out and a detective found them at No. 66 Bayard Street. Angelo was locked up, the bride was taken to the Waverly Home for Girls and the case put on the docket at the Essex Market Court.

The verdict of local women

TODAY is Bond Bread's birthday. And such a birthday party never has been seen in New York. When, with the help of local housewives, we perfected Bond Bread two years ago—when those women baked loaves of bread in their own ovens and submitted them in our baking contest to show the kind of bread they and their households wanted—there were some skeptics, some who believed that "this was just another loaf of bread." There were others who said "Oh! yes, Bond Bread may be all right for a week or two, but they won't keep the quality up—all baker's bread is alike anyway."

Today, just two years after the birth of Bond Bread, New York has rendered its overwhelming verdict—

"Bond Bread has made good!"

How have the purity and flavor of Bond Bread been safeguarded?

Two years ago, the General Baking Company pledged its Bond that in Bond Bread would be duplicated the best qualities of those home-made loaves.

Many people, especially experienced cooks, have marvelled that the quality of Bond Bread has continued so uniform, day in and day out. Here are some of the reasons:

1. Purity of ingredients. You cannot buy flour, sugar, lard, milk or yeast for your own use one whit purer than the ingredients used in Bond Bread.
2. Scientific control of the Bond Bread formula and process. From the time the ingredients first enter the mixing chamber every step in Bond Bread's process is scientifically controlled.

These are the same methods that have kept this Child of the Housewives as pure and sweet and wholesome as the day the process was perfected.

If you have not yet learned how these housewives helped improve the quality of bread, join the Bond Bread army on this second Bond Bread anniversary.
